

I have been an amateur radio operator since 1965. Over that time, I've helped out in times of emergency, both domestic and international. Based upon testing done by the ARRL, the noise level raised by BPL will just about eliminate amateur activity and render our bands literally useless. Until such time as BPL can be shown to not raise interference to the host of users who use HF frequencies I recommend it be studied, refined and fully tested before it is put into play.
