

BPL remains of great concern to me as all power lines carrying data will be a radiator. There has been little or no discussion on how BPL proponents intend to mitigate a potentially serious negative impact on communications, especially with the current world situation. Why would anyone want to promote something with the potential of compromising security of communication? Why is BPL a consideration, as there is cable and satellite available to a vast majority of Americans?