

It looks like a great idea, but what will be the cost to the consumers. If its higher then the present cost for our internet services, then it will fail and we the tax payers of this great Nation will paying for this new venture. Why not wait and rule on this until after the elections? Thru our research we found that other countries have started this experment and have shut it down because of other problems that has risen. As a tax payer please start being a resonible government body and be for the majority not a few.
