

I am not in favor of using power lines for the transmission of broadband service. It has too much of a capability to interfere with radio bands such as the ham radio bands. For the risk of the damage it can cause it is not worth it as there are a lot of broadband services in place already.