

The interference caused by BPL to the shortwave spectrum is well known and documented. Several other countries, such as Japan, have already evaluated BPL technology and cancelled development due to these interference concerns. The USA should not allow large companies to force detrimental technical polices on the public.