

The benefits, wider availability and competition, are not worth the risks of implementing such a poorly designed delivery system which is to be operated by an industry that has proven its inability to manage the very same transmission lines and the service provided over them.