

Any scheme for transmitting information over utility power lines needs to ensure it does not disrupt existing radio frequency use. Broadband internet transmission on these lines poses intractable problems in this regard. I do not favor any transmission scheme that would cause RF interference detectable at any distance greater than the physical right of way easement.