

Before BPL is even considered by the FCC, engineering studies and workable systems that are intended to be fielded should be evaluated and type certified in the real world. Smoke and mirror blue sky day dreams do not make real world workable solutions. With long distance WiFi internet connections of 30 miles or more being developed, there is no need for BPL.