

I am opposed to BPL. Sufficient testing has not been done. Consumers will not save money on internet access. Building on current wireless technology is a far better means of providing more access points.

If it were such a great idea, why don't we already have combined power and telephone lines?