

I wish to voice my concern regarding broadband transmission: It's probable that this operation will interfere with amateur radio operations. HAMS provide emergency communications and help coordinate disaster responses in troubled times. They assist with public events such as marathons. Communications satellites could be knocked out of the sky by foreign groups but HAMS could still communicate as most of us have radios in our cars and generators to power home-based radios. I think it would be a terrible thing to allow the broadband people to disrupt our communications and destroy an American tradition !
