

BPL becoming a reality is a very depressing thought. Destroying the worlds HF communications network is NOT smart these days. With the situation in the Middle East and the ability for ONE person to take down the entire internet network, how are we going to carry on world communications? If the internet is entirely shut down {very possible AND do-able} the transmissions via the power lines (BPL) would still be destroying the necessary HF radio waves.