

Power lines are not designed to be RF transmission lines.

BPL systems which radiate RF into the HF spectrum are a clear threat to the ability of Federal and state authorities -- and to volunteer amateur radio operators-- to communicate in the event of natural or other emergencies.

Every effort and due diligence should be exercised by the FCC to ensure that BPL internet providers are held to the standard that BPL systems should do no harm.