

As currently proposed, Broadband over Power Line will prove to be a regulatory and enforcement nightmare. Currently power companies have shown reluctance to address existing interference issues; when BPL is added to the power companies responsibility the FCC will be overwhelmed with complaints.