

I live on a corner property with power lines on three sides. If access BPL were to be installed in my area I should not notice it because the interference issues should be resolved before it is even offered to the public.

If I lived in a rural area, there should be no interference issues at all because BPL should be developed enough to make it transparent to any liscensed service or other consumer device.

Regards, Jim Sereda