Dear Commissioner Martin,

Honestly, I was not aware of this problem till I have seen a amw program. After seeing this show I had an idea on how to improve this problem. Since there are a lot of people use cell phones these days, of couse it is interfering with ems communications. If there will be a law or a reinforcement on shutting off the cell phones when hearing a police or firetruck or ambulance go by, there will be more wave open to emergency communications. The cell phones has to be off for at least 15 min or better more. That way there will be enough time for the emergency vehicle to get to the place and to make calls. If the citizens give the right of way to emergence vehicles, why not give the right of way to the emergency communications? It's is, if not more, as important. I hope this idea will help you to emprove the emergency communications system.

Sincerely,

Anastasia Murray

Hello people,

There is so much that i would really like to say concerning this subject; i know that you all have much more important things to do so i will keep it as short as possible. i think that you all have you priorities all confused up, instead of worrying about the word scum-bag on the radio along with other meaningless words, you should be worrying about our law enforcement officers, firefighter, and paramedics/emts who are sworn to protect us. when these fine men and women are out in the field, there are times when they cannot get in contact with their dispatch because of "dead spots" through out the nation. THIS IS RIDICULOUS. when an officer needs back up or there is a fire man/woman down or a rescue ambulance carrying a victim who has just been involved in an accident, and they can not get in contact with some one because of the spot that they are in; i think we have a serious problem on our hands. who cares how much money it will cost the government to move some broadcasting agencies to another frequency? you ask your self this, is it more important to loose lives of professional life savers or to spend to make their jobs better and safer? it is bad enough that emergency rooms have to turn away ambulances lets not make it harder on them and any other ems personnel.

Thank You
