

In lieu of recent findings linking increased teen sexual behavior with watching sexual activity on television, I feel that the same principle applies to violence. In all cases, government should seek to minimize the appearance of violence and sex on network television. If the public seeks to watch such, let them make the effort to find the material. Do not allow such to inadvertently affect our children to their detriment.